TUESDAL BYAHILM., APRIL 5.

Lured from Hor Home.

The story was printed at Atlanta, Ga., on Eunday, of the atduction of Miss Laura Brocks, of Coleman, Ga., who was spirited to a swamp and kept there for weeks.

Mies Brocks had a lover named Archie Bigbie The girl's father did not approve of their marriage, especially as Bigbie bad frequently expressed a determination to go West and follow in the footstaps of Jesse

An olopement was arranged. Bigble promising to take the girl to Port Gaines, marry ber, and return home. The night arrived and Blable with it. The couple went along a plant wion road to the Chat tahoochee river.

On the bank was a ten'. Bigble drove up and wer met by two outsws, Bill Carliele and John Moore, and a trugh female. Such wer Elighie's introduction of the girl to her fators home and associates.

She implored her abductor to marry ber, but he told her that such a course was not necessary. She was not allowed to absent here if at any time from the secluded swimp send zrons. The following night they embarked to their betsau and skniked away down the river. The grief etricken father only succeeded the past week in securing information regarding their whereabouts, and in company with Allen White left in pursuit. Just below the Fierid's line they heard of the fugitives and pushed shead, but hef re they reached the camp Carly e intercepted them. He ead the a rest of any or all of the party was impossible carped the management of the party was imnossible, especially by only two persons, as they were beavily armed, but that he would agree to carry one of them to the camp in his boat if he would go unarmed, and also endeavor to induce Bight; to give up the

They accepted the proposition, and White embarked with him. Befund the campon an isolated is and in a deree jungle and omposed read in a darse jungle and composed bidso. The poor girl was glad to see White, and began beging him at once to rescue her from her writhed position. Bigble appeared on the scene with his Wiache ter, and had it not been for the interference and the prayers of the piri, would, as he said, have 'made carden pair at a thin?"

White exercised al. bispower of ergnment in a tempting to get profession of the girl, but to no purpose, and finally after remaining all night at the cemp, come away with her under the protection of Car life and his Winches'er.
Miss Brooke tells a starting story of cruelty, lawlessness, and outlawry. She says they chained all their supplies by stealing from residents along t e river. A reward of $500 to Columbes hange over Car isle, and Mr. Brouke has offered a reward of $2.00 for Bigble. The sympathy of every one is with the girl and her family, and if Bigble is cought be will be ignored.
